through the Stuyvesant Square and Gramercy Square districts early this morning, and when daylight came had twenty-five men in their net, many Congressman J. Sloat Fassett were suspected of being in the "chloroform gang' of burglars and holdup men who have been terrorizing that part of New Inspector O'Connor and Capt. McDermott, of the East Twenty-second stree station, and were ordered last night He Would Not Take $1.000 by Commissioner Bingham to go through the district and arrest every suspicious man or woman found on the streets or in the all-night cafes or restaurants.

Spreading the Net.

Starting from Fourteenth street, the bers made their haunts along Third avenue between Fourteenth and Twentyeighth streets. The police believed, too, that loot stolen from some of the houses would be found in this section, and that if this could be located the man, who is believed to be either a doctor or a nurse and expert in the use of anaesthetics, who has been operating with

They lay quiet in East Fourteenth street until the fifty men had tsarted uptown, and then five of them got busy.

It is charged that these five went to the storekeepers and demanded money to defray the expenses of a mythical policeman's funeral. When the money was refused, it is charged, one member of the party would remark:

"We are members of the Paul Kelley gang. You come up with the money or it's your finish."
